Collecting Treasures

Most children enjoy collecting "treasures" such as stones, shells, flowers, leaves, sticks and feathers and love to show their peers/adults them. This simple act of collecting meets children's natural play urges and supports development. It has many learning opportunities including maths skills such as counting and categorising, language development by asking questions and by describing their "treasures" will facilitate vocabulary building, pretend play which supports social and emotional development and learning about ownership thus promoting a sense of pride and belonging. So many different learning opportunities - all happening through play! (www.firstdoor.com.au)

Along with following the children's emergent interests, our themes for the month of April will include:
